Joe Machicote
Founder, Diversonomix

Diversonomix founder, H. Joseph Machicote, has been at the helm of diversity training since its integration into the mainstream

American workplace in the late 1980s. Marrying his experiences as chief diversity officer for two major corporations with his extensive organizational development knowledge, Mr. Machicote created the "Diversonomix Strategy" -- the art of aligning diversity initiatives with business objectives in order to positively impact the bottom line -- to help Diversonomix clients create, define and leverage diversity and inclusion at all levels for all segments. Mr. Machicote holds a B.A. in Business Administration and Marketing, a Certified Master of Change Management, an M.S. in Organizational Development and is completing his Ph.D. in Industrial Organizational Psychology. A native of Harlem, NY, he currently resides in Charlotte, NC.

It is argued that the lingering effects of Mass Trauma (MTE) of genocide and slavery created a trauma response, unresolved grief and historical trauma (Brave Heart 1995) and post traumatic slave syndrome (Leary 2001). The effects of major past historical traumatic events have impact not only on the generation where the traumatic event occurred but the generations that follow. This conference will raise awareness of the traumatic repercussions that effect the current generations focusing on slavery, Jewish and the American Indian Holocaust.
